The girl had been lying unconscious on the ground after the incident. (Representational) A five-year-old girl died after a cow allegedly kicked her during an animal-human conflict at a village in East Delhi, police said Monday. The incident occurred late Sunday in Malmal village when some cows moved towards the girl's house. "An altercation between the girl and the cows took place. While one of the cows allegedly kicked her on the head. She was unconscious since then," a police officer said. The girl was taken to the Guru Teg Bahadur Hospital and was declared brought dead. The animal allegedly went away on its own, while a case has been registered in the matter, the police officer said. ALSO READ | Complaints of cow slaughter rack up in Delhi as country heads to polls. To define the maximally tolerated dose and the dose-limiting toxicity (DLT) of paclitaxel and cyclophosphamide (CT) combination chemotherapy in patients with advanced ovarian cancer (AOC). A total of 19 patients were treated in a single institution, with 28 cycles of CT (paclitaxel and cyclophosphamide). Paclitaxel was escalated in groups of three patients on a weekly basis (starting dose 30 mg/m²) intravenously (IV). Cyclophosphamide was then escalated in groups of three patients on a weekly basis (starting dose 500 mg/m²) IV, using dose-escalation and -de-escalation on the basis of grade 2 hematologic toxicity or grade 3 hematologic or gastrointestinal toxicity, respectively. Treatment was given on a 3-week schedule, every 3 weeks, with a maximum of six cycles. The maximally tolerated dose was 82157476af
